Capcom announces Street Fighter Alpha, Monster Hunter, Resident Evil Episodes and Devil May Cry MegaGames™
for FOMA® 903i series mobile phones!

Alongside NTT DoCoMo, Inc.'s announcement of Street Fighter Alpha for the newly unveiled FOMA® 903i series of mobile phones, Capcom is also pleased to announce that other popular franchises such as Monster Hunter, Resident Evil: The Episodes and Devil May Cry will also find a home on this new and exciting platform.

The titles announced today represent some of Capcom's most beloved brands. The Street Fighter series has achieved sales of more than 25 million units worldwide on home consoles, while the Resident Evil series has enjoyed more than 30 million units sold and includes successful adaptations into blockbuster Hollywood hit movies, making these titles appeal not only to game fans, but to entertainment fans around the world.

The FOMA® 903i series of mobile phones is capable of storing programs up to 1MB in size, which allows for high speed processing, and applications that were not possible until now. Furthermore, the 903i series includes features such as saving data to a memory card, or network connections allowing for the upload and download of data, meaning that there are no limits on development possibilities. These advancements have allowed us at Capcom to apply our programming expertise for cutting edge applications to the mobile phone platform.

Capcom continues to aim at the growing mobile market by utilizing new cutting-edge technologies and capabilities to develop increasingly high quality and original content, providing our customers with the highest forms of entertainment and maximizing profitability.
