Capcom to Release 14 New Online Games!

- Strategic titles for smartphones, PC and other platforms to target opportunities in the growing market for online content -

Capcom Co., Ltd. (Capcom) is pleased to announce that the company has decided to start selling or distributing 14 new online games for mainly Japanese and Asian markets.

Worldwide sales of game software were 61.4 billion US dollars in 2012 and are expected to increase to 86.6 billion US dollars in 2017. The online market, which includes PC online games, mobile content and other categories, is accounting for the majority of this growth. As a result, online content is a key element of Capcom's strategy for growth.

The 14 new titles include PlayStation®3 and Wii U™ versions of "Monster Hunter Frontier G", which has already achieved great success as a PC online game. The company will continue to extend the appeal of its renowned intellectual properties with titles such as "Street Fighter X All Capcom" and other app games for smartphones. In addition, Capcom will be releasing new PC online games like "Breath of Fire 6", online games such as "deep down" for next-generation home game consoles, a version of "Monster Hunter Frontier G" using traditional (not simplified) Chinese characters, and further content. By strategically launching titles for specific platforms and the needs of consumers in individual regions, Capcom plans to heighten its presence and profitability in each market category.

In addition to these 14 titles, Capcom plans to introduce many more titles for home game consoles and smartphones starting in the summer of 2013.

Capcom is determined to continue to meet the expectations of users by drawing on its outstanding development capabilities to create highly original games.
